TURNPIKE BONDS HAVE BEEN SOLD

Chicago Capitalists Will Take the Entire Issue at $7.755.

$100,000 OF 5 PER CENTS.

All of the Bonds Are Redeemable in Twenty Years.

The sale of $1,000,000 of 20-30 five per cent. turnpike bonds of Christian county has been concluded by County Attorney John C. Duffy and the committee appointed by the fiscal court. The price was $7.755 and the purchasers are E.H. Rollins & Co. of Chicago. The deal was closed privately with J. W. Edmond, after Gerald W. Peck, whose bid was a little higher, failed to comply with the conditions. The county insisted on having the bonds delivered in Hopkinsville and the contract will contain this provision. The bonds will be $1,000 each, dated July 1, 1907, and maturing in 1937, but redeemable in 1927.

The money is immediately available and must be used promptly or invested until needed. It is probable that there will be a vigorous effort to build as many new roads as possible this season.

In some sections the people offer a bonus for the pikes and the $100,000 will thus go further. We now have more than 100 miles of free turnpikes and Christian county will soon be able to boast of the best improved roads of any county in the state. The fiscal court and county attorney have acted wisely and deserve the praise of the people.

YOUNG OFFICERS LOST AT SEA.

Six Midshipmen and Five Sailors Sink With a Launch.

FROM THE MINNESOTA.

Were Run Down By a Barge While Returning From a Ball on Shore.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The loss at one time of six bright young midshipmen fresh from the academy at Annapolis, and a boatswain and four enlisted men attached to the battleship Minnesota, eleven men all together, as reported by the Navy Department, Thursday, was one of the most severe blows that has fallen on the personnel of the Navy since the Spanish war, in the estimation of the officials. They were:

Herbert Leander Holden, 22, Wisconsin.

Henry C. Murfin, Jr., 22, Ohio.

Walter C. Ulrich, 23, Wisconsin.

Philip H. Field, 22, Virginia.

Wm. H. Stevenson, 22, North Carolina.

Franklin P. Holcombe, 22, Delaware.

Robert H. Dodson, sailor, New York.

Jesse Conn, sailor, Louisville, Kentucky.

Frank R. Plumber, sailor, Washington.

Harley L. Van Dorne, sailor, Iowa.

George W. Westphal, sailor, Wisconsin.

The young men were returning from a ball in a launch, canvassed all round, and were run down by a coal barge in the darkness. The launch was found bottom upwards next morning.

STANDARD OIL CASE

Thrown Out of Court On Peremptory Instructions.

The famous Standard Oil case about which the editor of the Cadiz Record has had so much to say, has been thrown out of court on peremptory instructions Thursday. Last November a shipment of coal oil, about 8,000 gallons, was made to Cadiz and editor John Lawrence, inspector for Trig county, pronounced it only 125, while the law requires a grade of 130. The oil was shipped back to this city and mixed with 18,000 gallons that graded 134, which made the mixture all grade 132 according to the inspection of C. O. Prowse, of this city. Mr. Lawrence conceded only 128 and has indulged in much talk about "unpunished lawlessness" in Christian county growing out of this episode. Mr. Lawrence was here as the chief witness, but the prosecution utterly failed to make a case.

JAMESTOWN SURE.

Hopkinsville Boys Will Go On July 10.

Definite arrangements for the encampment of the Kentucky State Guard at Jamestown have been made by Adj. Gen. Lawrence. The First regiment commanded by Col. W. B. Haldman, of Louisville, is expected to leave home on July 1, departing from the exposition on July 10. It will be succeeded by the Third regiment, under command of Col. Jouett Henry, of Hopkinsville. At the close of the ten days the latter regiment will be succeeded in camp by the Second regiment, commanded by Col. Embury Allen, of Lexington.

GOLD MINE IN MAINE

BIG DEPOSITS BELIEVED BY GEOLOGISTS TO EXIST THERE.

Systematic Search of a Watchmaker of the State Have as Yet Proved Unavailing in Locating Treasure.

Geologists have said so, and they ought to know. They declare that somewhere hidden in the wilds of northern Maine, is a gold mine which holds immense wealth. Hundreds of prospectors have vainly searched for it, and its exact location remains a mystery.

Somewhere to the north and west of the Canadian Pacific railway where it crosses Maine is a granite, gneiss or mica schist ledge, holding one or more veins or seams of quartz rock, which are rich in virgin gold.

From the inability of the prospectors to make accurate measurements and draw reliable conclusions, the ledge which holds the gold may be 75 miles or 150 miles north and west from the railway, though the chances are that the distance is in the vicinity of 100 miles.

Reasoning from prevailing conditions in other gold mines, the chances are that the undiscovered source of Maine gold is in a quartz band or zone which, in geological times far remote, was subjected into a crack between the original granite and the later schist, and that when the mine is discovered it will be found to hold vast wealth.

Prospectors have found gold in Maine sands and gravels along the river courses for more than a century. Large quantities of the precious metal have been washed from the earth near Sandy river in Franklin county by three generations of Maine residents.

From 1816 to 1820 it is estimated that fully $50,000 of dust was taken out and sold, and again, some ten years ago, the mining fever broke out with fresh vigor, and for six months or more there were men camping near the river banks and washing the sands, with results that yielded from 75 cents to $1.50 a day to those who were diligent.

At the request of enthusiastic miners and promoters skilled geologists have visited the place from time to time, all of whom have declared the output of gold.

The trouble with the deposits is that nobody can find the present lode from which the grains of drift gold started.

About seven years ago Charles Holtz, a watchmaker of Danvers, came so interested in tracing the treasure back to its starting point that he spent three months in the woods digging and washing earth in the hope of gaining some definite information.

Buying a wheelbarrow and pans and the required chutes for washing the earth rapidly, he hired a mulatto man the next summer, and together they started out to trace the gold-bearing sands across Maine.

The following winter while Mr. Holtz sat in his shop and repaired watches and mended jewelry he thought out a plan for making a systematic hunt for the parent lode of the fugitive gold that had been found in Maine.

Accepting as a fact the statement made by geologists that all gold found in the state was of glacial or drift origin, he resolved to hunt back along the glacier markings on the exposed ledges and thus reach the starting point.

All of the fourth summer Mr. Holtz spent in the woods with compass and chain, measuring the angle of rock variation and determining a base line which could be used for rough triangulation. The direction of the glacier tracks led south by about 15 degrees east.

Running his base line at right angles to the direction of the glacier movement he secured a base 24 miles in length, and late in the fall, having determined the angles of the lines which should meet at some point in northern Maine or Canada, he went home to chart out the location of the hidden gold mine by trigonometry.

As Mr. Holtz was not a mathematician his work was far from accurate, but in a clumsy and faithful manner he was able to reach the conclusion that a valuable deposit of gold exists.

Mr. Holtz was obliged to abandon his quest after four years of search because of failing health.

THE SECRETARY MAY RETIRE

CARDINAL MERRY DEL VAL

The rumor that Cardinal Merry Del Val is to retire from the office of the secretary of state for Pope Pius X. is not new, for, during the troublous days which have followed the carrying out of the Vatican's policy in France, and for which the cardinal is said to be largely responsible, it has been frequently heard, but the present report, coming through private sources, seems to indicate that this important change is one of the certainties of the year future, and when it comes it is thought that it will, in a measure, alter the present policy of the pope.

Cardinal Merry Del Val was last entering his thirty-ninth year when he became secretary of the apostolic see, and because of his scholastic attainments and his theological training it was considered that he was peculiarly well-fitted to discharge the vast and wide-extending duties of his office. At that time he was already distinguished as a theologian and a deep student of church history. Latin was to him almost like a mother tongue; he spoke and wrote like an educated native English, French, Spanish, German and Italian. But while some regarded him as a fine product of the English school of thought, others and Stoneyhurst, as the son of a Spanish diplomat, and recalled the years he had spent in the most aristocratic ecclesiastical circles of Paris and Madrid, with all their inveterate reactionary influences, and recognized in him a son of the Spanish priest below his veneer of English training.

By no means the least to be considered of the cardinal's qualifications is his address and bearing, in both of which respects he has enjoyed an advantage over the leaders of other European chancelleries. His knowledge of the languages of different countries has been an ever present aid to him in his official communications with the leaders of the church in thought and government in various parts of the world, and it has also facilitated his intercourse with all with whom he has been brought in contact by the duties of his office. Being in the very prime of life and possessed of good health, he has shown a power of application and a devotion to the interests of the church which have surprised his friends and been the cause of much worry and trouble to those who have opposed him and the things for which he stood.

Few papal secretaries, perhaps, have been so severely criticised as has been Cardinal Merry Del Val, for it has been thought that he, even more than the holy father himself, is responsible for the encyclical of last August denouncing the French separation law and forbidding Catholics to obey it. The powers of the papal secretary of state are considerable. The office has been evolved from the time when the pope had representatives at nearly all the courts of Europe, and so at the present time the duties and responsibilities of the office are about halfway between the German and the English chancelleries of foreign affairs.

If the cardinal does resign his office and relinquish this vast power, it is certain that it will come as a result of dissatisfaction on the part of the pope with the policy pursued. In fact it is said that as long as two years ago the pope felt displeased over the action which his secretary had taken in refusing to permit the French ambassador to France and the Catholic press against the proposed separation of church and state. To the pope, who is familiar with the history of things it is known that Pius X. did not wish to send it; but allowed himself to be overruled by his secretary of state.

When the effect of the note was realized by the pope, a change in the secretaryship of state was hinted at, but of this many were skeptical, for it was pointed out that Pius X. was very determined in matters in which he was sure of his ground, but where he was not he was influenced by the last comer, so that the secretary of state would have to make some immense mistake, or mistakes would have to accumulate to such an extent that there would be a universal protest, before he would replace him.

But now, it is said, the pope has reached a decision, and the usually well-informed Rome correspondent of La Petite République of Paris formally declares that Cardinal Del Val shortly be replaced by a prelate who will be more conciliatory in his attitude toward France.

And if Merry Del Val does quit the question is being asked: Who will be his successor? Some say Rampolla, who, although 63 years of age, is still vigorous. Others say that Monsignor Kennedy, rector of the American college at Rome, may get this high office.

Monsignor Kennedy has been rector of the American college for years, and in a way has been the intermediary between the pope and the bulk of the English speaking countries. He is thoroughly conversant with the internal affairs of the Vatican. Should he be called to this office, Monsignor Kennedy would undoubtedly be created a cardinal in a private consistory, as was Cardinal Merry Del Val.

Monsignor Kennedy is a Pennsylvanian by birth. He is in his fifth year and at the time of his appointment to Rome was stationed at Overbrook seminary.

Men of the Moon Lightweights. The average weight of man is 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on earth that the 140-pound man would weigh only 83 pounds if transferred thither. With such light weight and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten-foot walls, and do various other extraordinary things. On a man would be even lighter.

But on the sun our 140-pound man would have his troubles. Instead of being an airy individual he would weigh ten and three-quarters. He probably would have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh 300 pounds.

According to scientific computation a man would weigh 140 pounds would go to the other celestial bodies with the following weights: Moon, 23; Mars, 53; Venus, 114; Mercury, 119; Neptune, 123; Uranus, 127; earth, 140; Saturn, 185; Jupiter, 371; sun, 3,871.

Where He Saved Money. "A good retort," said Charles W. Kohlsaat, commissioner general of the Jamestown exposition. "It reminds me of the retort of the duelist, 'I heard about last month abroad.'"

Two duellists were taking the early train for Fontainebleau, their place of meeting. "A return trip," said the first duelist to the ticket agent.

"I never do," said the second man quietly.

"Ah," blustered the other, "you're afraid you won't come back, are you?"

"As for me, I always take a return."

"I never do," said the second man. "I always take my return half from the deadman's pocket."

Attriborial "Capias."

In the recently printed "History of the Town of Middleboro, Mass.," there is a footnote quoted from "The New England Memorial," which gives a curious example of Indian courts and rules of practice in them. An Indian court in Barnstable county, presided over by an Indian magistrate, issued the following warrant to an Indian constable:

"You Peter Waterman, Quick you take him, Fast you hold him, Straight you bring him Before me, Rihoudi!—Youth's Companion."

UNCLE SAM IS HUNTING FOR NAVAL SURGEONS

WASHINGTON. — Notwithstanding the superior inducements which a naval career offers for a young physician over the uncertain and overworked practices of the average struggling general practitioner the medical corps of the navy has not found it possible to secure enough naval surgeons to meet the needs of the service.

Admiral Rixey, surgeon general of the navy, has adopted extraordinary measures to meet the case, even going so far as to send circulars to many of the best medical colleges soliciting applications from the graduates for appointment as naval surgeons. And to make the offer more tempting the surgeon general has undertaken to give temporary appointments as "acting assistant surgeons" to the young men who will pass a satisfactory preliminary examination and come to Washington for instruction.

They will receive six months' special training at the naval medical school and hospital recently established here or at the Mare Island naval hospital in the case of applicants from the Pacific coast. At the end of that course the graduates will receive appointments as assistant surgeons with an annual salary of $1,750, supplemented by allowances of $432 and mileage and other inducements.

The difficulty in securing applicants lies in the fear of the examination to which they must submit. Admiral Rixey insists that this fear is unfounded if the applicant has been properly grounded in the principles of medicine, while for the "collateral examination" which the candidates must take, this is nothing more than an elementary test of the candidate's general knowledge of English, arithmetic and literature, and even knowledge of foreign languages is not essential.

Not even these comparatively simple requirements, however, it is stated, are met by the majority of applicants, which in the opinion of the naval medical corps is a severe commentary upon the training afforded by many medical institutions. The shortage of doctors in the navy has become really serious. Today there are 64 vacancies in a corps that at its maximum should number only 350, and unless the deficit can be supplied normally before the end of the calendar year congress will be asked to add to the inducements now held out to applicants by considerably increasing the pay of naval surgeons.

OLD CLERKS IN LAND OFFICE TO LOSE JOBS

COMMISSIONER BALLINGER of the general land office has recommended to Secretary Garfield a general reorganization of the force of his office. The secretary has the matter under consideration and while no official announcement has been made of his intentions it is known that he approves Mr. Ballinger's plan and it is expected that it will soon be put into effect.

The first dismissals will be made in the division of the office in which land patents are proposed. There are about 75 clerks in that division, and of those about 15 or 20 will be relieved from duty. The reason for immediate action is the fact that the law provides for the typewriting of the patents and the recorded copies of them. Many of the employees are elderly persons who have been on the rolls for a long time and who can not use the typewriter.

The lowest salaries paid in the division is $900 per annum, and the commissioner complains that many of the employees can not earn that amount.

ROOSEVELT'S AMBITION ONCE WAS TO BE SAILOR

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT made his first speech when he was ten years old. At that time he would a bold sailor be. He had read all the marvelous tales of the sea and his ambition was to sail the ocean blue in command of a stanch craft that would carry him to the uttermost parts of the earth. He was permitted by his government to spend much time about the wharves of New York and he thus became personally acquainted with many of the most famous skippers of that time. Chief among his heroes was a certain Captain Doane, commander of the clipper ship Rival.

This old sea dog used to fill the mind of the future hero of San Juan with astonishing stories of storied sea and hairbreadth escapes from a speculator in Davy Jones' locker. It fired the imagination of the youth and stirred his ambition. In 1868, the boy of ten was present when a fund for popular subscription for the purpose of a library for the officers and crew of the Rival, all of whom were his friends.

At the head of a delegation of youngsters he visited the ship when it next came into port and with due ceremony presented the library, consisting of 45 volumes, to the skipper. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Roosevelt. When reminded a few days ago of this event by an old friend the president said he remembered it perfectly and that frequently he had wondered if any of the officers or crew of the Rival were still alive, and, if so, if they remembered his speech.

"I thought it was a mighty fine speech," said he, "and so did Captain Doane."

THE "GOVERNMENT SHAPE" CAUSES MUCH COMMENT

THERE is considerable breezy comment among certain women employees of Uncle Sam's two open shops—the government printing office and the bureau of engraving and printing—over what is termed by some of the fair workers the "government shape." It is said this shape was created by the civil service commission for the women employees of the bureau where the paper money and stamps are printed. It is as the proper thing for women in that branch to refer to their figures as the "government shape."

According to regulations of the civil-service commission the measurements call for women who are "tall and slender and sinuous!" height, 5 feet 8 inches; weight, 154 pounds; bust, 36 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips 43 inches, and back 15½ inches.

A case of the rejection of a young woman from Michigan is cited because she was not tall enough for her width to meet the requirements, although her percentage in other directions was said to have been high. It is explained that it is necessary for a woman in that order to be able to reach the notes while on the press. A woman of short stature could not reach the notes, while one of unusual girth would have room to stoop between the presses in the process of printing.

BROKE HIS NECK.

Fatal Fall of Former Christian County Man.

A dispatch from Beatrice, Nev., says: Frank Sutton, who formerly lived near Hopkinsville, Ky., was found dead in his barn. In the night he walked off the end of a hay mow and fell a distance of twelve feet, breaking his neck. Sutton was a noted western horse man, owning several horses of more than local reputation and a stock farm south of Beatrice. He was forty years of age and was unmarried.

Bottom Dropped Out.

The big fish pond on Mr. W. A. Radford's place near Pembroke was drained this week through a hole in the bottom about as large as a barrel. It was the finest fish pond in the county and 200 pounds of fish were picked up besides what were left in a small puddle in one corner. One carp weighed 22 pounds. The hole will be stopped with concrete and it is to be hoped the pond will be restored. It covered 2 1/2 acres.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Hopkinsville Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains. Most times 'tis the kidney's fault. Backache is really kidney ache; that's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. Many Hopkinsville women know this. Read what one has to say about it:

"Mrs. John Coombs, 1226 South Virginia street, Hopkinsville, Ky., says: 'For a great many years I suffered from a persistent aching across my loins and through my kidneys. At times my back was so bad I could hardly turn in bed; I could not lie on my back without putting my hand under it, for in this way it seemed to relieve the pain. A friend of Mr. Coombs told him about Doan's Kidney Pills and he got a box for me at L. A. Johnson & Co's drug store. On using them, I steadily improved until the dreadful aching was relieved and I could attend to my household duties without inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills did more for me than any other medicine I ever used, and I heartily recommend them.'"

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doans—and take no other.

West-Reynolds.

Miss Beulah Reason Reynolds and Mr. Robert Ellison West were married Wednesday evening at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. S. M. Stallings, on West 7th street, Rev. A. P. Lyon of the Methodist church officiating.

The bride is one of Birmingham's most beautiful and popular belles, and a young lady of charming personality and accomplishments. She wore a beautiful white silk mull over or white silk and carried white roses. Mr. West was attired in conventional black. He is one of Christian county's most popular young business men, and is known as a breeder of fine stock.

The couple leave for French Lick Springs to spend their honeymoon. A. FRIEND.

BATCH OF BILLS.

A Dozen Indictments Returned by the Grand Jury.

Judgment For Defendant In Damage Suit Against Railway Company.

The grand jury returned a batch of twelve indictments Thursday. The body is still in session and more bills are expected today.

The jury in the suit of Nannie Radford, col., against the L. & N. Railroad Company, on Thursday returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $400. The Radford woman claimed that while alighting from one of defendant's trains at Newstead about two years ago, the train was suddenly and without warning jerked forward, throwing her to the ground and causing painful and permanent injuries. She sued for $2,000 damages.

Alex Campbell, Jr., was adjudged of unsound mind yesterday and ordered sent to the Western Asylum for treatment. Mr. Campbell has been in bad health for some time.

Accidents will happen, but the best regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

Removed to Madisonville.

Mrs. Mattie Ledford, of Madisonville, who had been ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. P. Nuckolls, in this city for four months, was carried to her home Tuesday night. She was accompanied by Mrs. Nuckolls, Dr. J. E. Stone and Mrs. Rost, of Madisonville.

TOM HARMAN'S PRESCRIPTION

By VICTOR LAURISTON.
(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Tom Harman returned from the west in answer to the telegram announcing his father's death, he found himself at three-and-twenty, possessor of two inheritances—a widowed mother and a mortgaged homestead. Both were incentives to work.

He laughed at the jest, and proceeded to act upon it. He went forthwith to Dennison; and straightway his possessions doubled. To the widowed mother and the mortgaged home were added a position in Dennison's office, and the haunting memory of a pair of brown eyes.

"Who is she?" Harman queried of one of the clerks, as the girl went out.

"That's Miss Daisy Dennison," rejoined the clerk.

Tom Harman, bending over his desk, traced "D. D., D. D., D. D.," ad infinitum—or, at least, for as much as five minutes. Then, for the first time realizing what he was doing, he tore the paper into little bits, and threw them into the waste basket.

"What does this all mean, Tom Harman?" he queried of himself.

"You can't do much by writing 'D. D., D. D.' on your blotter, Tom Harman. No, sir!

This did not prevent him from thinking, however, nor from gazing in Miss Daisy Dennison's direction whenever that young lady was in sight. When, a few days later, Tom Harman was summoned into the manager's office, he was smitten with a vague presentiment that the summons must concern Daisy. Dennison he found frowning; but then, Dennison always frowned. The frown was as much a fixed characteristic of the man as his untidy bulk and his chronic catarrh.

"You're a strapping fellow, and look as if you could handle men. Would you take a job as outside boss? It means double your wages. Yes or no?"

"Yes," responded Harman; and went out to his new duties.

The work in the yards was hard in inclement weather, involving an immense amount of physical strain; but Tom Harman invariably found himself at six o'clock fresh and smiling, and, incidentally, the envy of his men. Nearly every evening Dennison could have seen his yard boss, spick and span, the bean ideal of young manhood, rowing Miss Daisy Dennison on the river or strolling with her in the park.

One night he ventured a question which resulted in the abrupt discovery that Miss Daisy cared for him.

"But I'm afraid," added the girl, "that Dad—"

"What about Dad?" queried Tom Harman coolly, as though Daisy's Dad were of his own rank in life, instead of the possessor of a couple of hundred thousands.

"Well, you see, Dad doesn't want me to marry anyway, because I'm all he has. Then, if I do marry, he thinks I should marry a man with a great deal of money."

"Old Lawyer Leslie?" inquired Tom, who had seen that personage much in evidence about the Dennison mansion.

"No—but Dad thinks a lot of me, and says I should have the best of husbands. And," she blushed, "he'll never know that's what I'm getting, because he's sure to judge a husband's merits by his money. Then, too, Dad's catarrh bothers him so much that he's always cross to everyone except me, and I'm afraid—"

"I have it!" cried Tom, as leaning adroitly to one side, he brought the craft to its proper balance. "You say his catarrh's bad?"

"Yes."

"That's good!" ejaculated Tom, softly.

"It bothers him more and more all the time," went on the girl, not heeding his comment. "He has a couple of doctors who give him all sorts of medicine. They say he'll have to give up his work and he does so hate to do it—"

"Better and better!" cried Tom, enthusiastically.

For some days he waited an opportunity to open his campaign. The chance came one day at noon, when Dennison called him into the office to inquire regarding some point of yard management. The matter adjusted, the old man's further comments were interrupted by a tremendous wheezing fit.

"You're a very bad cold, Mr. Dennison," remarked the plottor, sympathetically.

"Yes," assented the old man. "I'm afraid I'll have to go south for my health. Dr. Tompkins and Dr. Jennings both recommend a change of climate."

Tom Harman swung round very sharply, and, resting both hands on the desk before him, gazed across it squarely into the old man's eyes.

"Send them away and let me prescribe for you," he said. "I'll cure you."

"The dickens you will!"

"But I will, just the same. You were just going out. So was I. If you'll let me accompany you as far as Twenty-third street, I'll explain."

"We'll have to hurry to catch that car," said the old man, as the whirr

"Do You Know, Young Chap, I Actually Feel Good?" He Panted.

of an approaching trolley came to their ears.

Tom Harman smiled composedly. "We walk," was his response.

They made the distance to Twenty-third street in 19 minutes. The old man halted, perspiring, on a corner.

"Do you know, young chap, I actually feel good," he panted, as he wiped away the sweat.

"Don't you ever ride on the cars, Harman?" he asked.

"With all those people jammed against me, my feet cold and my head hot and my whole system dripping in poison from the foul air. No, sir. This walk is just the thing I need to keep me in condition. Try it every day, yourself. Open your windows at night. Take a cold douche every morning. Eat less and masticate thoroughly. Throw your doctors out the door and your medicine out the window. Exercise—if you'll let me call this evening, I'll show you something that won't take much time but will do you a world of good."

The old man was still glowing from his unaccustomed exercise.

"By Jove, I will!" he cried.

Tom was not surprised to receive another invitation to spend the evening at the mansion. He accepted it, with evident reluctance but with great inner joy. His hopes soared.

For a few days his cup of happiness was almost full. Then he noted, with sharp disappointment, that a doubtful look crept over Dennison's face whenever his self-appointed physician came in sight.

It worried Tom Harman as much as anything could worry him. He was worried all the more as, from day to day, the doubt perceptibly deepened. The climax came sharply one night, about a month after. Tom had been invited to spend the evening at the mansion. As he set foot on the broad colonial veranda, he chanced to overhear voices in a shady corner. He recognized Dennison's voice; and he was subtly conscious of Daisy's presence. He would have spoken; but what the old man had to say was said quickly, as a man, in the extreme moment of resolve, takes an unwelcome plunge.

"By Jove, little girl, I can't help it. I hate to disappoint you—I'm afraid you won't like the man of my choosing. I've always wanted you to marry a man of your own social and financial station. That Tom Harman's a genius. I never felt better in my life, and it didn't cost me a cent. I don't like to disappoint you—I hate to boss you—I know you've been brought up to look for a husband of your own rank—but I tell you what, Harman's got brains, and—well, I'd be mighty pleased if you made a match with him."

The subject of the conversation laughed very quietly to himself; then stepped into the hallway and rang the bell.
